Leno Carbillo was not a student, but had been taken there by Dr. Douglass to work on his paper, the Diocesan Record, as well as to do any other work that might be required of him. It is the opinion of some that Carbillo was intoxicated when he struck the fatal blow, and it seems that he had access to a case of alcohol, which, as it afterwards appears, he had been in the habt of imbibing. Leffingwell was only eighteen years of ag, and had commenced studying for the ministry of the Episconal Church. Carbillo was arrested, and waiving examnation, was committed to the county jail in
